Dilworth Paxson's Government Affairs practice group attorneys assist clients with timely, focused advocacy utilizing substantial experience and long-standing relationships on both sides of the aisle at the Federal level in the US Congress (House and Senate) and before Executive Agencies. They provide clients with incisive legal counsel at critical state and local levels involving complex permitting; regulatory enforcement and compliance issues; economic development and redevelopment incentives; government contracts and administrative litigation, and general advocacy at all levels of government.

These attorneys coordinate with legislators on the drafting and introduction of legislation, serve as bi-partisan advocates as clients' needs may dictate, and track legislation affecting the clients' interests, with particular experience in the Mid-Atlantic business region. Dilworth attorneys can provide research, advice and advocacy at all levels of government including the Federal and State legislatures, Executive Branch and Governors offices, and relevant departments and agencies.
